Wednesday, May 5, 2011 20th Century Fox has cancelled Faith Based after 3 seasons because the network and advertisers wanted the tone to change from the original intent. I have noticed a lot of people in the marketing department of the show just plain suck. They are quick to sell out to the network and network advertisers for their own well being. If you know anything about marketing and advertising its a very complex and difficult business and they have to like their jobs to keep them. They even had to air a promo for the controversial sex scene I saw on the internet. I know marketing people, they work 24/7 and they have to tell the company that has given them the job that they are really really good at what they do. So they are going to do what they are supposed to do to try and convince the company that they are a good at what they do. It is amazing to me that Fox is cancelling Faith Based. It is a good, faith based show. If you know about the show you know how important the faith in God is to these people. It is in their hearts and they are not ashamed to show it. It is especially in the community that will be effected. If you ask any of the actors that I have talked to they have told me that this show is very important to them and they are still very disappointed and saddened at the network cancelling it. The ones that had left said that they still wanted to do whatever they could to make the network bring it back. The fact that the network just didn't want to go that direction makes me mad and sad. I am very proud of the show because it shows faith in God in a way that 50b96ab0b6
